

The Social Studies Connection: Teacher Reflections

- Social Studies lessons contain many opportunities to teach math.
- Calculating the percentage of a population or the distance someone traveled are just two examples.
- These types of activities allow students to see how math can be used everyday thereby making it more meaningful.